

THE STORY OF WEXLER

Wexler was born with genetic defects that made it impossible to walk. He was born in a puppy mill cage and lived outside. He cannot tell us about his life before rescue, but xrays tell a story of pain and fear. These xrays show pellets lodged in his small body. You see, someone used him for target practice and he could not run away.

Wexler's legs required surgery and rehab to make him able to walk. His foster mother arranged a yoga/exercise class that raised the funds needed for his medical expenses and Wexler greeted each participant with a friendly kiss. Wexler now can walk normally and is adored by his family.

Many dogs like Wexler are destroyed by breeders because they cannot be sold. This is the business of puppy mills. Wexler hopes to bring awareness to puppy mill legislation issues in NC to save other dogs the pain and suffering he experienced.
