

In 2004, a young dog arrived, taking up residence under the deck of a house in Charlotte. The lady living at this house had recently lost her husband and, to this day, is convinced that God sent Becky to her. This family now consisted of a black lab mix, Annie and a cocker spaniel, Samone.

At first, the young dog, now named Becky was very frightened and trusted no one. Dogs can be so trusting though and Becky soon decided she wanted to stay with this family. The family bonded and Becky became a critical part of her mom's life for 14 wonderful years. She will always be remembered.

Becky was a black dog, the dog least likely to be adopted and the most likely to be euthanized in every shelter. Becky's gray muzzle told a story of years of "experience" in loving her family. She greeted each day as if it were a joy.

Becky became an angel dog this year but she will be in the heart of her mother forever. It is sad to lose a pet but to never have that love is so much sadder. Becky's mother would have it no other way.
